

Chief Harper receives ESRI Making a Difference Award

Chief Warrant Officer 4 Michael Harper was presented with a Making a Difference Award at the 7th Annual ESRI Federal User Conference Jan. 9-11 in Washington, D.C. ESRI president Jack Dangermond presented the award.

Harper, the military deputy/adviser to TEC's director presented the closing address at the conference which was attended by more than 1,900 geographic information users. In his address, Harper discussed the geospatial challenges facing the Army and the TEC programs that are focused on meeting those challenges.

"The conference was a great forum for all of us from the military and federal government to be able to get together and share what it is that we're doing, learn more about the tools, learn from each others experiences and meet others in our profession," Harper said.

Lt. Gen. James R. Clapper Jr., U.S. Air Force (retired) and former director of the National Geospatial-Intelligence Agency is a past recipient of this award.
